

Advertisement of a PhD position at the Martin-Luther University Halle-Wittenberg, Institute of Psychology, General Psychology, Prof. Torsten Schubert; starting from 1st of October 2018 for three years (option for prolongation)

Salary: German T-VL 13 (50%)

Your qualifications:

- Finished graduate courses (Diploma or M.Sc.) in Psychology or other sciences (i.e., Biology or others)
- excellent knowledge in Cognitive Psychology and interest in neuro-scientific research issues
- experience with behavioral research methods of cognitive psychology; experience and skills in the application of physiological research methods (EEG, eyetracking or others) are beneficial

Job duties:

- conduct investigations in the field of action control, attention and working memory with behavioral and neuro-scientific methods, for example on the impact of training, age, and/or motivation on action control (or other issues); the aim is writing a PhD
- teach classes on General Psychology and Neuro-cognitive Psychology for about 2 hours per week

You can expect an interesting work in a supporting and friendly research environment at the Institute of Psychology at MLU Halle-Wittenberg with good research equipment and collaborative relations to international and national research groups. Halle (Saale) is a nice town with good living and traffic connections to Leipzig and Berlin.

If you are interested, then, please, send your application by noting the number Reg.-Nr. 4-5881/18-H with the usual documents till 20th of July 2018 to Prof. Dr. Torsten Schubert, Institute for Psychology Martin-Luther-University Halle-Wittenberg, Emil-Abderhalden-Str. 26-27, 06108 Halle (Saale) or by email to (torsten.schubert@psych.uni-halle.de). For prior information, please, call Prof. T. Schubert (0345 55-24350).